

Buying or selling sex in Vancouver? CHAPS wants to hear from you!

The CHAPS (Community Health Assessment of Men who Purchase and Sell Sex) Project is a study of the health, safety, working and purchasing conditions for men involved in the sex industry Metro Vancouver wide. We are currently looking for self-identified men who have experiences purchasing or selling sexual services, who have solicited/been solicited in indoor, outdoor or online venues in Vancouver and who would be interested in participating in this study.

The project is part of a larger qualitative and ethnographic exploration of working conditions, health and safety in the sex industry.

This study is part of a community-based research project of the Gender and Sexual Health Initiative of the BC Centre for Excellence in HIV/AIDS and University of British Columbia, in partnership with the HUSTLE program at Health Initiative for Men (HIM).

Participants will receive an honorarium for their time.

If you're interested in participating and would like more information about the CHAPS Project, find out if you're eligible by calling 777-668-7465, or emailing chaps@cfenet.ubc.ca.
